

Anti-Slavery Office,
New York, 3 May, 1865.

My Dear Garrison,

I have taken for granted that you would bring Gerrintow to report our meeting. I certainly hope he will come, for it will be difficult to command the services of a competent reporter here at a reasonable price; and besides no one is so good as Gerrintow.

Mr. Lazar will get up music for us. I am now looking up the hymns. I hope Theodore will write one for us, but he is so full of business that he may not find time.

Ana Dickinson will deliver a eulogy of Lincoln on Wednesday evening, the day day following our Anniversary.

I can't help hoping that good sense will triumph in our meeting in a vote for dissolution. The death of Lincoln has not been without influence in the right direction. I am sure that your address and resolutions will make ~~up~~ the argument in as clear a light as to convince many persons.

Yours, faithfully,
Oliver Johnson.

See Anglo-African of Saturday for a vile attack on yourself and others. It was written by Dr. James McCune Smith, a mean, contemptible fellow.
